Ontario braces for superstorm

Holy hurricane.
Parts of Central Canada could get 100 mm of rain, 100 km/h winds between tonight and tomorrow

As the so-called Frankenstorm arrives on the doorstep of the U.S. eastern seaboard, the Canadian Hurricane Centre said Sunday that Sandy could bring winter weather to parts of Ontario.

Spokesman Bob Robichaud said southern and eastern Ontario and western Quebec could see between 50 and 100 millimetres of rain late Monday and early Tuesday.

The storm is expected to interact with a stalled front over Ontario and could cause heavier rainfall — more than 100 millimetres — in areas adjacent to Lake Ontario and northward to Algonquin Park, the centre said.

Forecasters warn that rain could change into snow over central Ontario, although it's too early to predict snowfall amounts.

"Snow is another thing we're going to have to consider with this thing, just because it's drawing in some cold air from the north," said Robichaud from Halifax during a media teleconference on Sunday.

The hurricane centre said parts of southern Ontario should brace for 100 kilometre an hour winds that could cause a bit of a mess, especially along western Lake Ontario.

Robichaud said the Maritimes could see between 50 to 75 millimetres of rain that will linger until Wednesday — Halloween.

It's a storm with far-reaching tropical storm-force winds that extend 800 kilometres from its centre, said Robichaud.

The Canadian government issued a news release Saturday saying it has received no reports of Canadians being killed or injured as a result of Sandy.

Bleeding victim sought help in restaurant before dying

Homicide 27. Man stumbles into pizza joint after being stabbed at a party

elisha.dacey@metronews.ca

A man has been arrested after the gruesome stabbing death of a 39-year-old man. Pizzeria patrons were left in shock after the victim, who was bleeding heavily, walked into the restaurant and tried to ask for help.

Winnipeg police said Adam Jackson Nattaway, 39, went to a party at an apartment building on Sherbrook Street. There, Nattaway got into a fight and was injured.

A witness, who asked not to be named, told Metro that Nattaway was stabbed in the neck and left the party bleeding heavily. "He trailed blood all the way," said the man, who identified himself as a neighbour next to the apartment block.

From there, Nattaway stumbled down the street and went into the Pizza Shack restaurant, trailing blood and looking for help.

Inside, he sat down on a chair and tried to ask for help, but couldn't speak. While emergency personnel did their best to keep him alive, he died in the restaurant before being taken away by ambulance. He was pronounced dead at the hospital.

Police said they rounded up party guests, including the suspect. This is the city's 27th homicide of the year.

The neighbour said the apartment is being renovated and that there were parties every weekend. "It's always loud up there," he said before declining to comment further.

Edmund Seymoure Wescoupe, 49, has been charged with manslaughter and has been detained for his alleged involvement.

Cadets take over downtown outreach

Terry Sakiyama, chair of the Main Street Project board, with former Downtown BIZ Outreach members Michael Vogt, centre, and Dustin Schollenberg, says she's honoured to now work with the Cadets in their new role downtown. BERNICE PONTANILLA/METRO

With thanks for a job well done, the Downtown BIZ Outreach program was officially concluded, its duties now taken over by Winnipeg Police Service Cadets.

"I can say, without a doubt, we have accomplished all of our objectives and goals and more," said Stefano Grande, executive director of Winnipeg's Downtown BIZ, on Friday. "After a five-year pilot program, we are now here to officially transfer our program to the cadets."

Grande credited Rick Joyal, manager of safety and development, as being the visionary behind the outreach program, which was meant to be an innovative way to deal with public intoxication.

Help

12,000

Downtown BIZ says, since the start of the program in 2006, more than 12,000 indigent individuals have been helped off the street and connected with social service providers.

"Because of them, our very — shall we say — scarce resources have been able to be used in other areas," said Mayor Sam Katz.

"Because they were out there, it freed up the paramedics in the ambulances, it freed up the first responders on the fire trucks, it freed up the men and women of the WPS to go do other jobs because they were there taking care of our citizens and for that, we owe them a debt of gratitude."

Former Downtown BIZ Outreach members Michael Vogt and Dustin Schollenberg said they're both now in the process of becoming police constables.

"It was an opportunity to build the skills we needed to get into the careers we were hoping to," said Vogt after the press conference.

Police investigation. Pair of raids nets marijuana, guns, two arrests

A lengthy drug investigation has resulted in two arrests, Winnipeg police say.

Several police squads, including the Tactical Support Team, searched two homes on Wednesday, one in the 400 block of Brooklyn Street and the other in the 800 block of Borebank Street. At the Brooklyn address, police seized 464 marijuana plants, with an estimated street value of $519,680, and grow-op equipment valued at $15,000. At the Borebank house, police recovered a 12-gauge shotgun, .300-calibre rifle, 30.06-calibre rifle and ammunition.

Reid Garry Schindle, 63, and Theodore Devron Lee, 37, have been charged with drug and firearm offences.

Both men are in custody.

Five people are facing drug charges after police pulled over an SUV in the North End early Saturday. The bust near the corner of Redwood Avenue and Charles Street was part of an investigation into a dial-a-dealer operation. Officers found 4.5 grams of cocaine in the SUV with a street value of about $360. Three men and two women were arrested and face several charges including trafficking. METRO

No leads in North End stabbing: Police

A man is in hospital after being stabbed in the North End early on Sunday. Police found the 29-year-old male victim on Euclid Avenue with the help of the canine unit and the Air1 helicopter. The man was taken to hospital in unstable condition but has since been upgraded to stable. Police say investigators have been given limited information about what led to the stabbing and no arrests have been made. METRO

First known death since 2000. Manitoban has died of hantavirus

A person in Manitoba is dead from complications of hantavirus, Manitoba Health says.

The department is not releasing the name of who died or where it happened, but warns people to use caution when working around or cleaning out areas where mice are living, because the virus is in the urine, feces and saliva of infected deer mice.

There have been four lab-confirmed cases of hantavirus in Manitoba since 1999, when the government started to keep records on it.

Early symptoms include fever and muscle aches, possibly with chills, a headache, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, abdominal pain and cough.

The province says this is the first recorded hantavirus death in Manitoba since 2000.

New bridge is great for cars, but for cyclists? Not so much: Activist

Difficult to navigate. Lack of separate bike lanes puts cyclists at risk, advocate says

BERNICE PONTANILLA
bernice.pontanilla@metronews.ca

The new Osborne Street Bridge is a missed opportunity, a Winnipeg cyclist says.

On Friday, Mayor Sam Katz and Premier Greg Selinger opened the $16.8-million bridge spanning the Assiniboine River just west of the Manitoba Legislature.

Lame lanes

"Rather than just a painted lane that leads you into a sidewalk, I'd rather see something that leads me to that next facility where I'm going to feel safe."

Cycling activist Mark Cohoe

Mark Cohoe, executive director of Bike to the Future, said while there has been a "marked improvement" on some of the features of the bridge, such as a 1.8-metre shoulder on the roadway, cyclists will continue to find it difficult to navigate.

"It's not a bicycle lane, so that's a bit of a disappointment that we don't have the full protection of a bicycle lane," Cohoe said. "We don't really consider this a completed project until we're connecting south fully to Roslyn Road to make that connection … which will eventually have bicycle lanes on it connecting to Nassau."

In a press release, the province and city boast of separate accommodations for cyclists leading from the bridge to the Assiniboine Avenue–Granite Way half-signal crossing, including Winnipeg's first dedicated bike signal, and widened transition for cyclists from the bridge to the roadway at the southwest corner.

"It's one of the busiest bridges in Winnipeg and it's very important that it be in good shape," Selinger said during the ceremony, adding that 40,000 vehicles travel on it every day.

The original Osborne Street Bridge was built in 1882 and reconstructed in 1977.

Superstorm packing a punch

Hurricane Sandy. U.S. northeast coastal areas evacuated as big storm collides with two other weather systems

U.S. cities from Washington to Boston braced Sunday for the onslaught of a superstorm that could menace some 50 million people in the most populated corridor of the U.S., with forecasters warning New York could be in particular peril.

"The time for preparing and talking is about over," Federal emergency management administrator Craig Fugate warned as Hurricane Sandy made its way up the Atlantic. "People need to be acting now."

Forecasters warned the storm could wreak havoc over 1,300 kilometres from the East Coast to the Great Lakes. States of emergency were declared from North Carolina to Connecticut. Airlines cancelled more than 5,000 flights, Amtrak began suspending passenger train service across the Northeast and New York and Philadelphia moved to shut down their subways, buses and trains. They, along with Washington, Boston and Baltimore, also called off school for Monday. President Barack Obama, who met with federal emergency officials Sunday, said Sandy is a "serious and big storm" that will be slow-moving and might take time to clear up. The government would "respond big and respond fast" after it hits, he said.

As rain began to fall over the Northeast, thousands of people in coastal areas from Maryland to Connecticut were ordered to clear out Sunday. That included 50,000 in Delaware alone and 30,000 in Atlantic City, where the city's 12 casinos were forced by Gov. Chris Christie to shut down.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Wintry mix

- Rain. Forecasters said the storm could bring nearly a foot of rain, a potentially lethal storm surge and punishing winds extending hundreds of kilometres outward from its centre.
- Snow. It could also dump up to two feet of snow in Kentucky, North Carolina and West Virginia.

Members of the Ross family watch the rough surf of the Atlantic ocean in Margate, N.J., Sunday. Hurricane Sandy was blamed for 65 deaths in the Caribbean before it began churning up the Eastern Seaboard. It was expected to hook left toward the mid-Atlantic coast and come ashore late Monday or early Tuesday, most likely in New Jersey, colliding with a wintry storm from the west and cold air streaming down from the Arctic. # New Yorkers stock up, but some are skeptical of commotion

New Yorkers were scouring local pharmacies and grocery stores for last-minute needs Sunday afternoon, hours before the first drops from Hurricane Sandy were expected to fall.

At a Duane Reade in Lower Manhattan on Broadway, shelves were stripped of flashlights and most candles.

Hannah Sanderson, 29, a student who lives nearby, said she was "frantically" trying to find candles. She was already stocked up on water, flashlights and food, she said.

Last year, she left the city during Hurricane Irene only to be stranded at her parents' house in Maryland, which was much worse off. This year, she was determined to stay in her apartment.

"I'm getting scared a little," she said. But she added, "I'm much less alarmist now. Last year, I was really scared. This time ... it's just a lot of hubbub."

Kristen Stack, 25, who works in finance, said she decided around noon Sunday to finally stock up.

"I figure, it's better to be safe than sorry," she said, with a basket full of bananas, bread and water.

She lives in a zone where on Sunday Mayor Michael Bloomberg had ordered a mandatory evacuation.

"I haven't decided" whether to leave, she said.

Her boyfriend, Brooklyn resident Zechariah Metzler, 27, who works in film, added, "I'm not concerned," but said stocking up was the smart option.

Taxpayer savings from registry repeal unclear

Long gun. 2008 RCMP report quotes estimated savings that add up to a fraction of registry's operating cost

Range officer Patrick Deegan aims a rifle at a private range in Calgary in September 2010. The Conservative government that championed the end of what it calls the "wasteful and ineffective" long gun registry isn't saying exactly how much the registry's repeal will save taxpayers. JEFF MCINTOSH/THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Conservative government that championed the end of what it calls the "wasteful and ineffective" long-gun registry can't say exactly how much the registry's repeal will save taxpayers.

More than seven months after the registry was officially ended in every province and territory except Quebec, the RCMP is citing a 2008 report — based on a 2004 costing model — to suggest the registry's repeal will save somewhere between $1.5 million and $4 million a year.

The registry of all firearms cost $7.7 million to operate in 2010-11, the last full year for which information is available. So why are the projected savings so small?

Neither the RCMP nor the public safety minister's office will offer an explanation, although the ongoing registration of handguns and restricted weapons must account for some of the difference.

"We have nothing else to say on this issue other than what we have provided you," RCMP spokesman Sgt. Greg Cox responded in an email after almost a week of correspondence with The Canadian Press.

Nor is the RCMP able to provide any cost estimate of destroying the gun-registry data, saying only that it will be absorbed within the national police force's budget.

"The staff who are working on the project to destroy the data are RCMP employees who are also working on other day-to-day tasks," Cox wrote.

Francoise Boivin, NDP justice critic, believes the government's inability to provide precise costing says a great deal about years of gun-registry spin.

"If your accountant was answering that way you would fire him on the spot," Boivin said in an interview.

"They've got all the information. Problem is, they don't divulge it because they're worried it might not prove exactly the point they've been stressing over and over."

West Coast earthquake.
Vancouverites stock up on survival gear just in case

First-aid kits, radios and survival gear flew off Vancouver store shelves the day after a 7.7-magnitude earthquake near Haida Gwaii shook nerves across B.C.

Though few reported feeling the earthquake in the city, Vancouverites rushed to outdoors and hardware stores Sunday to stock up on just-in-case provisions.

"As soon as I saw the news coming in on Twitter about Haida Gwaii, I thought, 'I've been meaning to do this for years,'" said Vancouverite Paul Nixey. "It's always that thing that slips to the bottom of your list." Nixey, 29, bought the last first aid kit at one Home Depot in the city. There were three empty shelves where the medical kits used to sit, he said.

At the Mountain Equipment Co-op in Vancouver, staff said many customers were buying radios — an item on the province's earthquake-preparation-kit list — and asking for directions to the first-aid section.

Grace Hiebert, 32, has a half-made earthquake kit at home, but decided to complete it after Saturday's quake.

"It made it more real, that it could happen," she said as she browsed MEC's aisles for water containers, survival blankets, candles and dry food.

Hiebert was once evacuated from a fire and knows how stressful emergency situations can be.

"You're panicking so you don't know what to take, you're grabbing random things," she said. "I know for myself having them all in one place will reduce the panic."

The Haida Gwaii is an archipelago about 700 km north of Vancouver.

Amendment to knock out segregation gets Round 2

Deep South. Critics say the revised proposal still has flaws and needs to do more

In this May 3, 1963 photo, a 17-year-old civil rights demonstrator, defying an anti-parade ordinance of Birmingham, Ala., is attacked by a police dog. BILL HUDSON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS FILE

Segregation ended decades ago in Alabama, swept away by the civil rights marchers who faced down police dogs and fire hoses in the early '60s. But segregation is still mandated by the state's constitution, and voters on Nov. 6 will get only their second chance in years to eliminate an anachronism that still exists on paper.

Election Day in this Deep South state could be the day Alabama amends history.

Amendment 4 — the proposal to delete the constitution's archaic language affirming segregation — is tucked amid routine issues of sewers, bonds and city boundaries on a crowded Election Day ballot. It's a striking call to see if Alabama will repeat what it did in 2004, when the state narrowly voted to keep the outdated and racially controversial language, bringing national ridicule upon the state.

The second time won't be any easier than the first because Alabama's two largest black political groups are urging a "no" vote. They say the proposed changes would wipe out some racially charged language, but would retain segregation-era language saying there is no constitutional right to a public education in Alabama. And they've been joined by the state's main teachers' group in refusing to go along.

Amendment 4 would excise outdated language about poll taxes and separate schools that many consider racist. But the critics say the language being proposed as a substitute undermines funding for public education by reaffirming that there is no right to a public education at taxpayers' expense in Alabama.

"It is a wolf in sheep's clothing. It seems so good but is so bad," said black Democratic Sen. Hank Sanders of Selma, a New South founder.

Retired University of Alabama law professor Martha Morgan, an expert on Alabama's constitution, says voting "no" on Nov. 6 is likely to give the state another black eye. But she said it's better to get a black eye than "to inflict a mortal wound to public education by taking away the right to public education."

Support

Senator stands by amendment

Supporters of Amendment 4 say retaining the two outdated provisions from an era when African-Americans attended separate schools from whites sends a harmful message. They argue that it could drive off businesses from a state struggling to lower an 8.3 per cent unemployment rate that remains above the national average.

Amendment 4's sponsor, Republican state Sen. Arthur Orr of Decatur, said he knows other states have used the racist language against Alabama when competing for industries.

"It's important symbolically to send a message to our sister states and to the world that Alabama is a different place than it was 50 years ago," he said.

Orr's proposal has drawn support from Republican Gov. Robert Bentley, Alabama's chief recruiter for new industry.

The e-book plot thickens

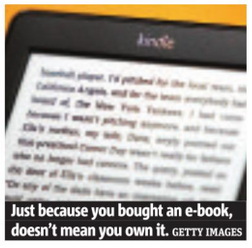
Suddenly, her entire collection was gone. Consumers don't have full ownership rights of their digital purchases



Just because you bought an e-book, doesn't mean you own it. GETTY IMAGES

If all the books on your shelf suddenly disappeared, you'd probably say you'd been robbed.

But when a Norwegian woman lost access to her Kindle books without warning, she learned she had never owned them in the first place.

Linn Jordet Nygaard, 30, an IT consultant from Oslo, said the debacle began two weeks ago when her Kindle stopped working; she later discovered she was locked out of her Kindle account, and could not access her library.

In what appeared to be an administrative error, Nygaard was told her account had been closed for violating Amazon's terms of service, and she was reminded that her e-books were not her property.

Nygaard's account was restored Monday, and Amazon is shipping her a new Kindle. But the story serves as a reminder that consumers don't actually own their e-books or other digital media. They are licensing them — and the retailer can yank them back at any time.

"It's a real wake-up call for consumers," said David Fewer, an intellectual property lawyer and director of the Canadian Internet Policy and Public Interest Clinic.

When you buy a copy of The Great Gatsby from a bookstore, it becomes your property — you can loan it to a friend, sell it in a garage sale, hand it down to your kids.

But Amazon, Kobo Books and Apple iTunes state you cannot share or resell the content, and access can be revoked at any time. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Dragon brings back astronauts' urine samples

An unmanned space capsule carrying medical samples from the International Space Station splashed down in the Pacific Ocean Sunday, completing the first official private interstellar shipment under a billion-dollar contract with NASA.

The supply ship brought back nearly 900 kilograms of science experiments and old station equipment. Perhaps the most eagerly awaited cargo is nearly 500 frozen samples of blood and urine collected by station astronauts over the past year.

The Dragon is the only delivery ship capable of returning items now that NASA's shuttles are retired to museums.

The privately owned California-based SpaceX company launched the capsule three weeks ago full of groceries and clothes — ice cream as well as fresh apples were especially appreciated by the station residents, now back up to a full crew of six. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chinese leaders heed protesters' calls

Pollution. It is unclear whether authorities will cancel petrochemical project or continue when pressure is lower

After a weekend of protests by thousands of citizens over pollution fears, a local Chinese government relented Sunday and agreed that a petrochemical factory would not be expanded, only to see the protesters refuse to halt their demonstration.

The standoff in the city of Ningbo has highlighted the deep mistrust of the government in China. Should they continue, the demonstrations would upset an atmosphere of calm that leaders want for a transfer of power in the Communist Party leadership next month.

The protest had swelled over the weekend and led to clashes between citizens and police. The Ningbo government said in a statement Sunday that they and the project's investor had "resolutely" agreed not to go ahead with the expansion. The factory is a subsidiary of Sinopec, one of the biggest petrochemical companies in the world.

Outside the government offices, an official tried to read the statement, but was drowned out by shouts demanding the mayor step down. On the third attempt, the crowd briefly cheered but then turned back to demanding that authorities release protesters being held inside. The city was likely under great pressure to defuse the protest. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Syria. Ceasefire broken with bombing of rebel areas over Muslim holiday

A Syrian man sits on a hospital trolley suffering partial loss of memory after being shot in the head by a sniper in Aleppo, Syria. NARCISO CONTRERAS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Syria's air force fired missiles and dropped barrel bombs on rebel strongholds while opposition fighters attacked regime positions Sunday, flouting a UN-backed ceasefire that was supposed to quiet fighting over a long holiday weekend but never took hold.

The failure to push through a truce so limited in its ambitions — just four days — has been a sobering reflection of the international community's inability to ease 19 months of bloodshed in Syria. It also suggests that the stalemated civil war will drag on, threatening to draw in Syria's neighbours, such as Turkey, Lebanon and Jordan. "This conflict has now taken a dynamic of its own, which should be worrying to everyone," said Salman Shaikh, director of the Brookings Doha Center think-tank.

The UN tried to broker a halt to fighting over the four-day Eid al-Adha Muslim feast that began on Friday, one of the holiest times of the Islamic calendar. But the truce was violated almost immediately after it was supposed to take effect, the same fate other cease-fires in Syria have met.

Activists said at least 110 people were killed Sunday, a toll similar to previous daily casualty tolls. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Suicide bomber targets mass

A suicide bomber rammed an SUV loaded with explosives into a Catholic church holding mass on Sunday in Kaduna, northern Nigeria, killing at least seven people and wounding more than 100 others in an attack that sparked reprisal killings in the city, authorities and witnesses said. As rescuers tried to reach the wounded, angry youths armed with machetes and clubs beat to death two Muslims passing by the ruins of St. Rita's Catholic church. An Associated Press reporter saw the men's corpses outside the worship hall.

Sao Paulo sees 28 deaths in four days

Police in Brazil's largest city say the metropolitan Sao Paulo area is suffering a wave of violence that left 28 dead over four days.

Police told the Estado de Sao Paulo newspaper that five people died and 12 were injured in shootings between Saturday night and Sunday morning. The newspaper reported that this was the fourth night in a row with multiple murders. There were 28 people killed by Sunday morning. Police told the newspaper that most of the victims died in drive-by shootings by men on motorcycles.

Wireless. Struggling Nokia pins hopes on Windows Phone 8

For Nokia, it comes down to this: Is Microsoft's new phone software going to get it back in the smartphone race, or is it going to be too late?

After being the top seller of cellphones in the world for 14 years, Nokia failed to meet the challenge when Apple in 2007 introduced the dazzling iPhone that caught the imagination of design-conscious customers and rattled mobile markets.

The Finnish company hit a downward spiral that has led to shrinking sales and market share, plant closures, thousands of layoffs and downgrades by credit agencies to junk status.

On Friday, research firm IDC said that in the July-to-September period, Nokia slid for the first time off the list of the top five smartphone makers in the world.

It's still the second-largest maker of phones overall, but sales of non-smartphones are shrinking across the industry, and there's little profit there.

The ailing company's CEO, Stephen Elop, sees Microsoft's new Windows Phone 8 software as a chance to reverse that trend, describing it as a catalyst for the new models.

Analysts are calling this a make-or-break moment for Nokia. "Nokia is placing a huge bet on Microsoft and if the gamble doesn't pay off, the losses can be high," said Neil Mawston from Strategy Analytics near London. "It's putting all its eggs in one basket and that's quite a high-risk strategy." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Unified look

- The launch of Windows Phone 8 follows on the heels of Windows 8 for PCs and tablets, which Microsoft released Friday.
- The PC and tablet operating system has borrowed its look from Windows Phone, meaning Microsoft now has a unified look across PCs and phones — at least if people take to Windows 8.

PC, tablet buyers aren't abuzz over Windows 8: Poll

Radical redesign. New OS is most significant overhaul since 1995

Microsoft bills Windows 8 as a "re-imagining" of the personal computer market's dominant operating system, but the company still has a lot of work to do before the makeover captures the imagination of most consumers, based on the results of a recent poll by The Associated Press and GfK.

The phone survey of nearly 1,200 adults in the U.S. found 52 per cent hadn't even heard of Windows 8 leading up to Friday's release of the redesigned software.

Among the people who knew something about the new operating system, 61 per cent had little or no interest in buying a new laptop or desktop computer running on Windows 8, according to the poll. And only about a third of people who've heard about the new system believe it will be an improvement (35 per cent).

A Microsoft store product advisor in Seattle displays the new Surface tablet computer on Friday during the first day of sales for both the Surface and the Windows 8 operating system. ELAINE THOMPSON/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chris Dionne of Waterbury, Conn., falls into the former camp. The 43-year-old engineer had already seen Windows 8 and it didn't persuade him to abandon or upgrade his Hewlett-Packard laptop running on Windows 7, the previous version of the operating system released in 2009.

"I am not real thrilled they are changing things around," Dionne said. "Windows 7 does everything I want it to. Where is the return on my investment to learn a new OS?"

Microsoft usually releases a new version of Windows every two or three years, but it's different this time around. Windows 8 is the most radical redesign of the operating system since 1995.

Microsoft is hoping the way Windows 8 looks and operates will appeal to the growing number of people embracing the convenience of smartphones and tablets. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Where'd all the fish go? Sockeye inquiry report could prove damning for Ottawa

Some who took part in the inquiry looking into why millions of sockeye salmon vanished from one of British Columbia's most prized fisheries are already anticipating what the report might say, and many believe the news won't be good for the Department of Fisheries and Oceans.

After listening to 160 witnesses, compiling 14,000 pages of transcripts and 2,100 exhibits, B.C. Supreme Court Justice Bruce Cohen must deliver his report to the federal government by Monday, although it remains unclear when, or even if, the document will be made public.

One of the groups that participated in the inquiry was the Watershed Watch Salmon Society, and its executive director Craig Orr said he believes the inquiry has proven major reforms are needed in how fisheries and natural resources are managed by the federal government.

"The evidence was really clear that government is going to have quite a report on its hands and there's going to be a very high expectation that there's going to be some major changes made," he said. "The bigger question I think ... is government going to have any meaningful reactions to the report, other than the usual deny, delay and distract kind of approach that we seem to get."

The federal government called the Commission of Inquiry into the Decline of Sockeye Salmon in the Fraser River in November 2009. Months earlier, just 1.4 million sockeye showed up in B.C.'s rivers and streams in a run that was anticipated to be around 10 million. THE CANADIAN PRESS

CITY HALL OF HORRORS

URBAN COMPASS
Colin Fast
winnipeg@metronews.ca

Normally, Winnipeg City Hall is a pretty quiet place. Meetings sometimes last just minutes. The public galleries sit mostly empty. And just a few lonely reporters toil away in the basement, trying to inform a public that largely doesn't seem to care.

But this year, just in time for Halloween, it seems the place has been transformed into a civic house of horrors.

First, the city built a fire hall on property it doesn't own yet, and the fire chief negotiated a million-dollar land swap under questionable circumstances. Now a special audit is going to go back over several years of city real-estate deals to see if there are any other surprises.

That same fire chief approved a major expansion of another new fire hall, even though there wasn't a clear use for the extra space and there wasn't any money to pay for it. The chief apparently thought the extra space wouldn't cost anything more.

A new garbage system was rolled out, and there was panic in the streets as collection days were missed and bags of leaves started to form military-grade bunkers along back lanes.

Civics lesson?

While most city bureaucrats and politicians likely think these developments are cruel 'tricks', the one major 'treat' has been a surge of interest in civic affairs.

The mayor got in trouble for buying a private Arizona company from his friend, the city's CAO. So then he sold it back to the CAO, somehow thinking that would erase the public's memory of the incident.

Then it was revealed that the mayor also bought a million-dollar Arizona house from a relative of a local developer who also happens to be his business partner in the Goldeyes ... and who also happens to be building all these new fire halls.

On top of all this, the brand new police chief made national headlines this past week for sharing his thoughts on using prayer to fight crime. While his comments were taken somewhat out of context, the city's horrific attempts to manage the media on this story turned the whole thing into an unholy PR mess.

Scary stuff, indeed.

But while most city bureaucrats and politicians likely think these developments are cruel "tricks," the one major "treat" has been a surge of interest in civic affairs.

Newspaper and social media websites are jammed with comments about what's happening at city hall. The six o'clock news is being led by actual news rather than features on waterskiing dogs. And reporters from several media outlets covered the last city council meeting, frantically tweeting away live updates for a public that's eager to feed on the latest scandal.

Of course the challenge for city council is to see if they can take this sudden increase in public engagement and turn it into a positive. Get people talking about where the city is going and what council should be doing going forward, rather than dwelling on recent mistakes.

Because if it can't clean up the mess and refocus the conversation, council might find that it's haunted by these events for years to come.

Happy Birthday, from Billy Idol

A Seattle man says that having Billy Idol play his 26th birthday party made for the greatest night of his life.

Michael Henrichsen spent two years persuading the British rock icon to play his party, and it finally paid off at the packed Showbox SoDo club on Friday.

First, Idol guitarist Steve Stevens played him Happy Birthday in the middle of a solo. Then Idol called Henrichsen onto the stage for a rendition of the song.

Henrichsen's '80s cover band even got to play the opening act.

Idol said that Henrichsen's effort stood out from other fans' requests because his campaign involved four Billy Idol Aid charity concerts that raised $13,000 for the Northwest Harvest food bank and the American Red Cross.

Idol says that agreeing to play Henrichsen's party in Seattle might help fans see another side of him.

WarGames (1983)

Matthew Broderick is a teenage hacker who inadvertently breaks into what he imagines is a video game server but turns out to be a military supercomputer. When he begins to "play" Global Thermonuclear War, the lives of billions hang in the balance.

Tron (1982)

A sentient computer program shoots a laser at Jeff Bridges and sucks him inside its mainframe into a digitized world where programs are people who wear glow-in-the-dark hockey helmets and everybody gets a mini Captain America Frisbee shield. This virtual world, which presaged the Internet and the personal computing boom, was a visual tour de force.

The Wizard (1989)

Fred Savage and his video game savant brother hitch and hustle their way across America en route to a video game championship in L.A. with future indie rock queen Jenny Lewis (Rilo Kiley) in tow. While E.T. wrote the book on product placement, with the stranded alien developing a craving for Reese's Pieces, The Wizard took merch integration to a whole new level, promoting a flurry of Nintendo titles and the Universal Studios tour while seamlessly spinning a rollicking tween-age fantasy.

Grandma's Boy (2006)

While critics were foaming at the mouth to dump on this sophomoric R-rated romp about a 35-year-old video game tester who moves in with his granny (Doris Roberts), the Golden Girls meet American Pie gross-out comedy holds up quite well on the gags per minute metre compared with Happy Madison Production's most high grossing fare. High Times magazine even feted this budding cult classic with a trio of awards, including the coveted Best Stoner Movie.

Scott Pilgrim vs. the World (2010)

Sheepish yet irrepressibly endearing in a neo-nebbish hipster kind of way, Michael Cera (basically playing himself) sets out to defeat his fuchsia-haired girlfriend's seven evil exes who might as well be video game bosses. By injecting a litany of gaming tropes into an indie rock love story, this comic-book adaptation is not only an epic nerdgasm, but it just might spawn a new sub-genre.

Fewer musicians rocking the vote this year

Election. Singers raising awareness about the issues rather than the candidate who supports them

PAT HEALY
Metro World News in Boston

Many Americans are asking themselves if they are better off than they were four years ago. Is it still easy for them to attend politically inspired music events as they did during Barack Obama's initial bid for the presidency?

During the past two election cycles, rockers and rappers were stumping hard for their favourite candidates. But in 2012, only a handful seem to be rocking the vote.

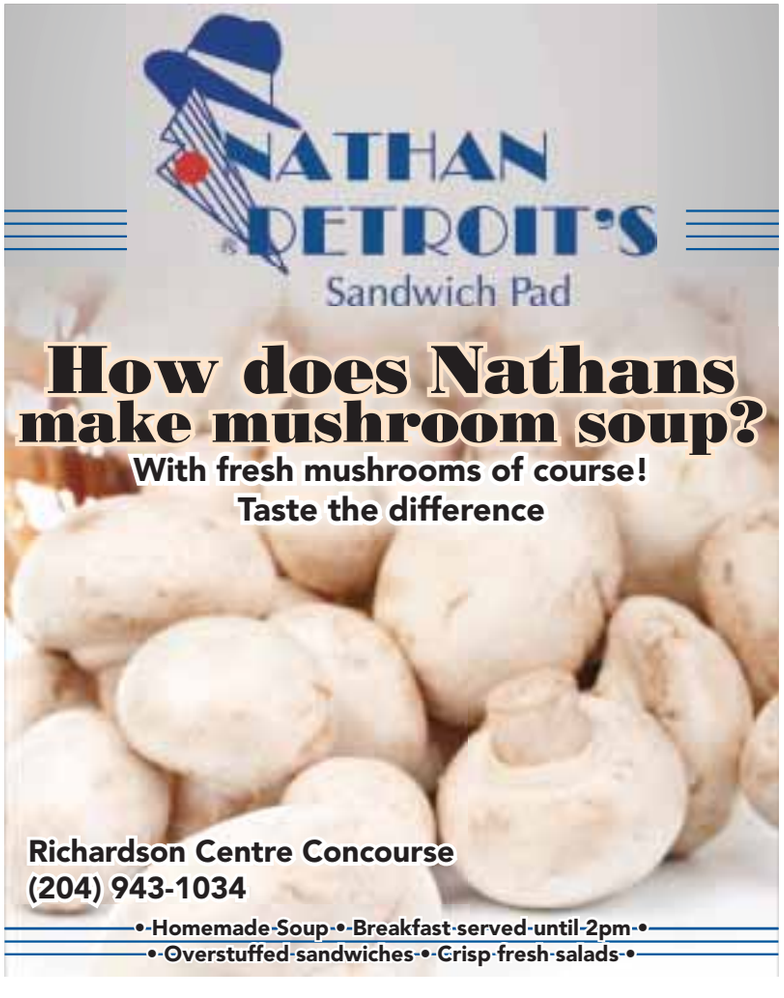
A few days before he began playing special sets in the swing states of Ohio, Iowa and Virginia, Bruce Springsteen let his views on the upcoming election be known. Though his left-leaning opinions came as a surprise to very few, his words contained one interesting nugget as to why there aren't as many people joining in a chorus to get the youth to the polls.

"This presidential election is different than the last one because President Obama has a four-year record to run on," wrote Springsteen on his website. "Last time around, he carried with him a tremendous amount of hope and expectations. Unfortunately, due to the economic chaos the previous administration left him with, and the extraordinary intensity of the opposition, it turned into a really rough ride. But through grit, determination and focus, the president has been able to do a great many things that many of us deeply support."

That "really rough ride" could be why only a few musicians have hit the stage for their candidate this time around. Acts such as James Tay-lor, The Walkmen, The National and Jim James of My Morning Jacket have played election events for Obama, while Kid Rock played a set before a Romney rally in Colorado earlier this week. But the message of hope that characterized Obama's 2008 bid for the Oval Office enchanted far more musicians into lending a hand.

Earlier this week, a number of politically active women, including musicians Zoe Kravitz, Carrie Brownstein and Sia, posted a webcam montage of themselves lip-synching to Lesley Gore's 1964 hit, You Don't Own Me, as text flashes across the screen with this message: "Mitt Romney and the Republican Party plan to overturn Roe v. Wade, immediately defund Planned Parenthood, shut down the nation's family planning program and repeal the affordable care act. Let's send them a clear message on Nov. 6." At the end of the video, Gore says to the camera, "I recorded 'You Don't Own Me' in 1964, and it's hard for me to believe, but we're still fighting for the same things we were then."

Interestingly, the political message is more strongly "don't vote for Romney" than it is "do vote for Obama."



Capitalism tour

Rollins rants

Henry Rollins is doing spoken word shows as part of his Capitalism Tour leading up to the election. Though he tells Metro the tour is bipartisan, he isn't shy with his opinions.

"Look at the numbers, look at the house bills," says the former Black Flag singer. "I don't listen to the vitriol, I look at the bills. Romney wants to get rid of Planned Parenthood, which is an amazing institution. That tells me a lot about you. You're going to get what you're going to get. Mr. Obama has brought a lot of change and a lot of people don't like change. A lot of people are voting emotionally, or out of anger, and often they end up with the president who's going to make things worse for them."

Henry Rollins

But like many of the other artists playing election shows, Rollins says what is more important than who you vote for is that you actually vote. "It's alarming to me that a large portion of people in this country who can vote don't vote," he says.

LINDA LABAN/METRO

Civil rights. Having FUN. with marriage equality

Another group focusing on the issues is the organizers of Freedom to Love Now! A Concert for Marriage Equality.

The show, to be held Tuesday at New York City's Beacon Theatre, features Rufus Wainwright, FUN. and Doveman (a.k.a. Thomas Bartlett), who organized the show with friends Brice Rosenbloom and Simon Rentner.Rentner says there's a reason they made the show about the political issue rather than a politician.

"The whole notion of having the freedom to marry and what that represents is kind of a conservative value. There are a lot of log cabin Republicans and you can't really pigeonhole who is into the idea of granting the freedom to marry for all people. … But obviously we needed and wanted to do this concert a week before the election because this election will have the opportunity to influence countless lives."Rentner stresses that the show is about shedding light on what he says should be seen as a civil rights issue. It's also about fun — or FUN., rather. "Given the apathetic climate that we sometimes feel, especially during the re-election year of a candidate, hopefully [FUN.] can be a galvanizing force, especially for the kids." PAT HEALY/METRO

Christina Aguilera throws Simon Cowell under the bus

Christina Aguilera doesn't mince words when it comes to her feelings about X Factor host Simon Cowell.

As she tells the Hollywood Reporter, Aguilera used Cowell's earlier gig as a judge on American Idol as an example of how not to behave when it came to her own judging duties on The Voice, her reality singing competition show.

"I saw the commercials early on of American Idol of Simon," Aguilera remembers. "I was like, 'Man, that's not what it's about.' I didn't want to treat people like that. I wanted to do The Voice to show that we can be positive. We don't have to knock people down."

Pretty Woman finds a sequel

While Emma Roberts has done her best to dodge comparisons between herself and famous aunt Julia Roberts, she chose this year's Halloween costume as the best time to highlight the connection.

Emma stepped out over the weekend done up as Julia's famous character from Pretty Woman, complete with blonde wig, miniskirt and midriff-bearing tank-top, according to Us Weekly.

She hit up a Halloween party in the get-up on the arm of her boyfriend, American Horror Story star Evan Peters, who was dressed as a cowboy.

Justin Timberlake has finally spoken out about the infamous video of L.A. homeless people wishing him and bride Jessica Biel well, played at his wedding.

"I think we can all agree that it was distasteful, even though that was not its intention. I want to be very clear … I am not defending the video," Timberlake writes on his website.

"I had no knowledge of its existence. I had absolutely zero contribution to it."

While not taking responsibility for the video — made by a friend as a gag wedding gift — Timberlake is still offering an apology.

"I want to say that I am deeply sorry to anyone who was offended by the video," he writes. "My friends are good people. This was clearly a lapse in judgment, which I'm sure no one who is reading this is exempt from."

The great snack debate

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
Kathy Buckworth,
kathybuckworth.com

In the 21st Century, the "snack" shelves in every grocery store across North America and Europe are taking up exponentially more real estate. And in response, the occasions on which it is deemed necessary or desirable to have a snack has grown exponentially as well. For instance, it is no longer acceptable to turn up at the following events without a snack for your children:

1) The neighbourhood park. Even if the park is two minutes away and, judging by previous visits, your visit will last for a grand total of six minutes. In fact, I now believe that the whole purpose of going to the park is to eat a snack outdoors.

2) Any child's sporting event. Soccer, baseball, hockey — all must include not only a snack, but a "snack schedule." I did an informal Twitter poll and found out that 99 per cent of moms don't support the idea of the structured snack, yet somehow that one per cent who do turn up at every single sports teams orientation meeting, spreadsheet in hand. I am now starting an informal "Stop the Snack Madness" campaign for my children's sports. The kids are not speaking to me, but it's worth the price.

Now's the time to talk prostate

Movember. It's almost time for mustache-growing month, a movement in support for prostate cancer

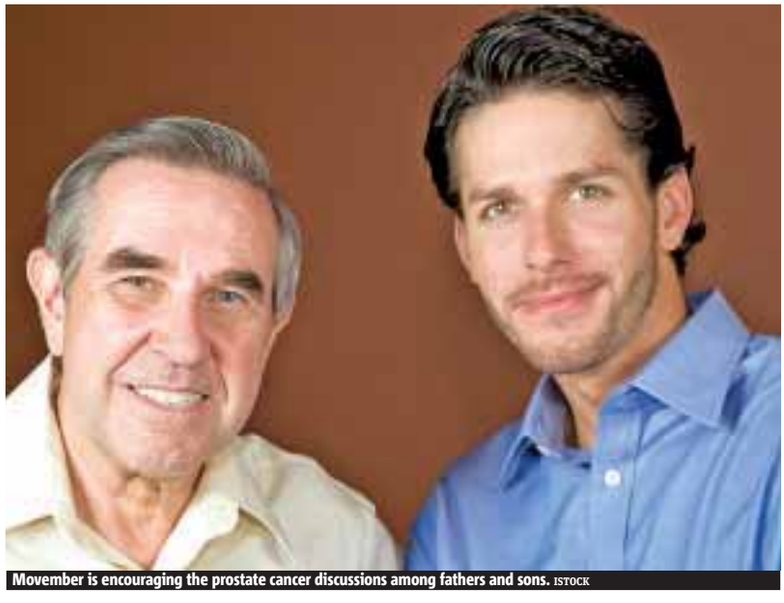
life@metrones.ca



Movember is encouraging the prostate cancer discussions among fathers and sons. ISTOCK

When fathers and sons bond over a cold drink and have "the talk," the talk is usually the awkward but necessary conversation about sex. While the scope of health wisdom dads dole out to their male offspring may also extend to the virtues of hand washing, regular exercise and sunscreen application, it is double-eagle rare that the just-for-men cancer will come up. But thanks to Movember, this is changing fast.

"Men typically don't talk about below-the-belt issues," says Rebecca von Goetz, executive vice-president of Prostate Cancer Canada. "However, it is becoming much more common place to have discussions about prostate cancer and to ensure that at one's annual physical, a discussion about the risks of this disease are addressed."

According to the latest Canadian Cancer Society statistics, 26,500 new cases of prostate cancer will be diagnosed in 2012. That makes prostate cancer the leading incident cancer ahead of lung, colorectal and breast cancer. And with 4,000 deaths a year nationally, it's the third leading cause of cancer mortality among men.

Still, talking isn't always easy. "Having a discussion about prostate cancer can be a psychological minefield," explains Dr. Daniela Friedman, a University of Waterloo graduate, now an associate professor specializing in cancer communication at the University of South Carolina's Arnold School of Public Health.

In her work on family communication and prostate cancer, Friedman has found that the recent controversy surrounding screening using the prostate specific antigen (PSA) test has complicated the prostate cancer conversation. False positives are frequent and the PSA can also detect cancers that are too slow growing to be a threat in the patient's lifetime.

Over-diagnosing these slow growing cancers can lead to bleeding and infection from biopsies and may cause erectile dysfunction and incontinence. "This is a disease people associate with impotence and losing one's (manhood,)" says Friedman. "I find that many men are embarrassed ... especially when it comes to the digital rectal exam."

In her 2012 paper, It Takes Two to Talk about Prostate Cancer, published in the American Journal of Men's Health, Friedman examines the heightened embarrassment men feel when talking about prostate cancer.

One of the men in her research study commented that male pride gets in the way, surmising that this is why Michael Jackson probably was always holding onto his reproductive area during performances.

Movember is all about making guys more comfortable opening up about the walnut sized gland located just beneath the bladder. "[The event] encourages men to band together — fathers and sons included — and the likelihood of a prostate cancer conversation is heightened as they share their efforts in growing their moustaches to raise awareness and funds for men's health," adds von Goetz.

Carry your baby, help a mother

DOROTHY ROBINSON
Metro World News in New York City

Carrying your baby is always in fashion.

But now Christy Turlington Burns, the American model best known for representing Calvin Klein from 1987 to 2007, is aiming to make it more fashionable.

Her charity, Every Mother Counts (EMC), which helps raise awareness about maternal mortality, has teamed up with Ergo baby carriers to create a line of products that benefit EMC.

"We wanted to bring in a (unique) design aspect to this collaboration, so we chose fabric from a local designer in West Africa," says Turlington Burns about the collection, which features two different carriers: a diaper bag and a waist-pack.

The designer, Chantal, is from Togo in West Africa. She uses textile design to support her children.

"This print and the story of Chantal add to the ultimate goal of this partnership, which is to bring women together in support of one another."

Maternal mortality

Ergobaby's Guest Designer Series facilitates awareness and support of Every Mother Counts: "People are unaware of the statistics about maternal and child health, or they assume that these problems are only in other countries and cannot affect them," says Turlington Burns. "Many reduce the issues to political discourse and use it to divide people when this is one thing that should really unite us all. If we want our children to thrive, we must address the health of our mothers — preferably before they become moms."

- 290,000 girls and women die during pregnancy and child-birth related causes each year.
- 90 per cent of these deaths are preventable.

This recipe serves six. RYAN SZULC/ROSE REISMAN'S FAMILY FAVORITES (WHITECAP BOOKS)

This mushroom, spinach and goat cheese phyllo pie is similar to Spanikopita but is made in a pie pan. It's a wonderful main course and works equally well as a side dish. Serve it with a mesclun salad.

1. Preheat the oven to 350 F. Lightly coat a 9-inch pie pan with cooking spray

2. To make the filling, lightly coat a nonstick skillet with cooking spray. Add the oil and set over medium heat. Add the onion and sauté for 5 minutes or just until the onion begins to brown. Add the garlic and mushrooms and sauté for 6 minutes or until mushrooms are no longer wet. Stir in the spinach, basil and salt and pepper. Cook for 3 minutes. Remove from the heat.

3. Stir in the goat cheese and mozzarella and the dill, green onions, olives, breadcrumbs and egg. Stir until all the ingredients are well combined.

4. Layer 2 sheets of phyllo in the prepared pie pan, keeping the remaining phyllo sheets covered with a damp tea towel to prevent them from drying out. Leave the edges of the phyllo sheets hanging over the edge of the pan. Lightly coat with vegetable oil. Layer the remaining sheets on top, spraying every other sheet. Carefully spoon the filling into the pie pan. Fold the phyllo sheets overtop to enclose and lightly coat with cooking spray.

5. Bake in the preheated oven for 25 minutes or until the phyllo is golden and the filling is completely heated through.

ROSE REISMAN'S FAMILY FAVORITES (WHITECAP BOOKS)

Ingredients

- 2 tsp vegetable oil
- 1 cup finely chopped onion
- 2 tsp finely chopped garlic
- 3 cups sliced mushrooms
- 1/2 package frozen spinach, thawed, drained, chopped and squeezed dry (about 5 oz)
- 1/2 tsp dried basil
- 1/4 tsp each salt and pepper
- 1/2 cup each crumbled goat cheese and shredded low-fat mozzarella cheese
- 1/3 cup each chopped fresh dill, green onions and black olives
- 2 tbsp seasoned dry bread crumbs
- 1 egg
- 6 sheets phyllo pastry

Puff pastry pissaladiere. Quick tart-like dinner

1. Heat oven to 425 F. Coat baking sheet with cooking spray. Unfold sheet of pastry and set on prepared baking sheet.

2. Use paper towels to pat dry roasted red peppers, without mashing them. Cut peppers into thin strips. Then arrange evenly over the pastry, spacing them so as to have enough to cover the tart. Then arrange the anchovies over the red peppers.

3. Season the tart with black pepper, then sprinkle the chopped olives evenly over the tart. Sprinkle Parmesan cheese evenly over everything.

4. Bake 15 minutes, or until pastry is puffed and browned at edges and cheese is melted and lightly browned. Cut into squares and serve warm.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ingredients

- 1 sheet frozen puff pastry (each 17.3-oz package contains 2 sheets), thawed according to package directions
- 2 roasted red peppers, drained
- 2-oz tin oil-packed anchovy fillets, well drained
- Ground black pepper
- 1/4 cup chopped Kalamata olives
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan

What does 'it all' mean? Today's women have a different definition

It's just a job.
Study shows women rank happiness over hierarchy when envisioning job success

JULIA WEST
life@metronews.ca

The idea of "having it all" varies from person to person, of course. However, a new study on women in the workplace by LinkedIn and Citi found that "only 17 per cent of women [surveyed] stated that reaching the height of success in their field was a factor in their assessment of 'having it all.' For the majority, success was defined by a job that they enjoy."

For many of the women surveyed, marriage and children weren't tied up in the definition of "all": 36 per cent of respondents weren't concerned about marriage and 27 per cent didn't cite children.

A little later for little ones

"Millennial women are putting off having children until they are nearly 30."
Amy Lynch
Consultant at BridgeWorks

"Millennial women are putting off having children until they are nearly 30," explains Amy Lynch, a consultant who works with BridgeWorks, an organization that helps businesses connect with different generations of employees and customers. "They seek work-life integration. Millennials don't see hard divides between work time and family time."

Ultimately, no matter what having it all means, most of us are counting on it at some point: Only four per cent of women who participated in the survey felt that having it all was unattainable. Julia Hartz, co-founder and president of Eventbrite, agrees to some extent. "What I've found," says Hartz, "is while I think you can have it all, you can't have it all at the same time."

Gender equality

Although the survey focused on women, assuming that the definition of success varies between genders is dangerous.

- "It should mean the same thing as 'having it all' for a professional man," says Susan Lucas-Conwell, CEO of HR consulting firm Great Place to Work. "Being a woman should not make one stitch of difference in terms of the opportunities presented to me in the workplace."

The In-Credibility Factor

Name: Christine Josic
City: Toronto
Age: 34
Occupation: Federal crown prosecutor

THE IN-CREDIBILITY FACTOR
Teresa Kruze
life@metronews.ca

From a young age, Christine had always loved working with children, and went to university to become a teacher. After taking a criminal law course she found the courage to change her focus and began studying to be a lawyer.

She obtained her BA in criminology and criminal justice from Carleton University, her Canadian law degree from the University of Ottawa and her American law degree from Michigan State University, ultimately landing an articling position at the Crown law office, criminal division in Toronto.

Today she is a Federal Crown prosecutor in Toronto, but has also kept her dream of teaching alive by being a course instructor at the University of Guelph.

I knew I was on my way when... I was offered a job as a prosecutor right out of the interview.

My first day was very overwhelming and exciting because I was parachuted into the busiest criminal courthouse in the country. I enjoy helping people and using my voice to advocate for the public interest.

Double the dream

"I teach advanced law and politics at the University of Guelph as well as being a crown prosecutor, which is a definite challenge, but I love it because I'm bridging both of my passions at this point in my career."
Christine Josic

Right now I teach advanced law and politics at the University of Guelph as well as being a crown prosecutor, which is a definite challenge, but I love it because I'm bridging both of my passions at this point in my career.

Christine Josic PROVIDED

Action Plan

• Prepare yourself for opportunity: My family is very hardworking and always valued education. They gave me everything they had, but I had to bridge the gap, so I worked, sometimes up to three jobs, while going to law school. Don't limit yourself. Create your own opportunities.

• Choose your own path: Be selective where you spend your time and efforts. Use your skills and focus on moving forward and progressing. Don't become stagnant in your career.

• Nurture your relationships: I didn't get here on my own.

I had help from my family, defense lawyers, Crowns, judges and colleagues.

I am constantly learning from those around me and I've been surrounded by a lot of strong women in my career who have given me poignant advice at critical points.

I truly value those relationships and they have been a major contributor for where I am now and where I'm going in the future.

Gregg and Bastille both won gold medals as Canadians swept the second set of women's and men's 500-metre events in this weekend's World Cup stop in Montreal.

Maltais, from La Baie, Que., won Canada's third gold medal of the day in the women's 1000-metre final.

Woods, McIlroy set for China duel

Tiger Woods is expected to get a $2 million US appearance fee and Rory McIlroy $1 million for their one-day exhibition match Monday in Zhengzhou, China.

The top-ranked McIlroy and Woods, a 14-time major winner, will play their first head-to-head match in an event without other competitors at Lake Jinsha International Golf Club.

The 18-hole medal-match has been dubbed the "Duel at Lake Jinsha."

Smoke and mirrors: Pitchers rule playoffs

World Series. Composite post-season ERA of 3.04 through Saturday was baseball's lowest since 1991, according to STATS LLC

When the San Francisco Giants scored twice off Detroit's Anibal Sanchez in the second inning of Game 3 of the World Series, Tigers fans at Comerica Park immediately grew edgy.

In this post-season, two runs can feel like 20.

"They're normally hard to come by in post-season, because you're going to face a good pitcher pretty much every night," Detroit manager Jim Leyland said.

Leyland saw that first-hand this year. The Tigers reached the World Series thanks to a fabulous performance by the starting rotation — and they entered Game 4 on Sunday night on the verge of elimination for pretty much the same reason. San Francisco led the series 3-0 after shutting Detroit out in Games 2 and 3.

The Giants became the first team to throw back-to-back shutouts in the World Series since Baltimore blanked the Los Angeles Dodgers three times in a row in 1966.

That dangerous Detroit slugging tandem of Miguel Cabrera and Prince Fielder? As quiet as Cabrera's bases-loaded popup in Game 3.

It didn't seem like anyone would top what Justin Verlander and the Tigers did on the mound through the first two rounds of the post-season.

Pitching history

- At one point, Detroit's starters went 30 1/3 innings without allowing a run, a record for a single post-season.
- Then the World Series began. After three games San Francisco's World Series ERA was 1.00, the lowest since Baltimore's 0.50 in 1966, according to STATS LLC.

The Detroit ace allowed one run over two division-series starts against Oakland, shutting out the Athletics in the decisive fifth game. In the AL championship series against the New York Yankees, the Tigers gave up only six runs in a four-game sweep — and four of them were against closer Jose Valverde in one inning of Game 1.

San Francisco's Ryan Vogelsong has become the third pitcher to make four straight starts in a single post-season in which he allowed no more than one run. Tim Lincecum has provided a lift out of the bullpen. Even Barry Zito has pitched well lately for the Giants.

"I've been watching these guys all year," San Francisco shortstop Brandon Crawford said. "They're a lot of fun to play around."

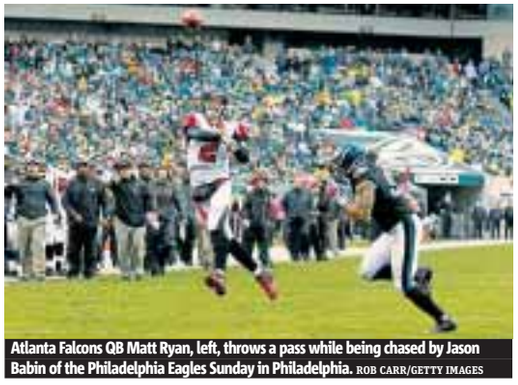
Falcons fly higher than Eagles, stay perfect



Atlanta Falcons QB Matt Ryan, left, throws a pass while being chased by Jason Babin of the Philadelphia Eagles Sunday in Philadelphia. ROB CARR/GETTY IMAGES

Asante Samuel stared directly at his former team's sideline and started trash-talking right after the coin toss. By the fourth quarter, Samuel was dancing on the field between plays.

Matt Ryan made it easy for his loquacious teammate to gloat.

Ryan threw touchdown passes on Atlanta's first three possessions against the Eagles and new defensive co-ordinator Todd Bowles, and the Falcons remained the NFL's only unbeaten team with a convincing 30-17 win over Philadelphia on Sunday.

Week 8

| Falcons | Eagles |
|---|---|
| 30 | 17 |

"We're 7-0 over here, baby," Samuel said. "If I was over there now, they have to go to work."

The Falcons are 7-0 for the first time in the franchise's 47-year history, while the Eagles (3-4) lost after a bye for the first time in 14 games under coach Andy Reid since 1999.

"That was an embarrassing performance," Reid said. "I'm stating the obvious. We need to get better. I need to do a better job. This is fixable. We have the talent."

Ryan finished 22 of 29 for 262 yards and three TDs for his first win against his hometown team in three tries.

Michael Vick didn't turn the ball over for once, but he played so-so and failed to beat his former team in his second start against the Falcons since returning to the NFL in 2009.

Horoscopes

♈ Aries
March 21 - April 20
Give your body a rest. Use your brain to get things done. One way, of course, is to get others to do them for you and the art of persuasion will come easy to you today. You know just what to say.

♉ Taurus
April 21 - May 21
The Sun in your opposite sign of Scorpio means you have to accept the fact that others are in the driving seat at the moment. Why not go along for the ride? Who knows, it could be fun.

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You need to be honest with yourself about how far you have come and how far you still have to go to reach your goals. Changes have to be made and now is the best time to decide what they should be.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
There is no way you are going to realize your ambitions without help from other people, and what happens today will bring that fact home to you forcefully. It's time to be more of a team player.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Your understanding is such that you now accept that recent setbacks were not designed to destroy you but to toughen you up for the challenges ahead. Start making plans – and make sure they are big ones.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You may need to be alone with your thoughts, and that's okay, but don't switch off from the world completely because there are things going on you need to be aware of. Put your phone on mute, but keep it turned on.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Travel and social activities are under good stars today but you are advised not to make any long-term plans – that is, more than seven days ahead – because things will change rapidly next week. For now though, have fun.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
You may be feeling on top of the world but something unexpected will bring you down to earth over the next 24 hours. It's no big deal but it is a reminder that change is the only constant in life.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Mercury, planet of the mind, moves into your sign today, boosting your self-belief and making it easy to get motivated. However, long-term success depends on more than just confidence. Are your plans realistic and reachable?

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Stop worrying about what other people might think about you and start using your mind to get ahead in the world. You have everything going for you now and only doubt can keep you separated from success.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
The bigger your dreams the more you will need assistance from people who have made the same or similar journeys before you. What can you learn from their mistakes so you don't have to make your own?

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
People in positions of authority are well disposed toward you at the moment and if you are smart you will make the most of it. Let them know what you can do.
